Shiel, in his inimitable sketches of the Irish bar, tells of the verdict of a Clare jury, in a case of "felonious gallantry." They acquitted the prisoner of the capigreat undacency." R. Shelton Mackenzie, in his notes to Shiel's text, says: "This is nothing to the verdict of a Welsh jury: 'Not guilty-but we recommend him not to do it again," Mackenzie also relates that an English jury, not very bright, having a prisoner before them charged with burglary, and, being unwilling to convict him capitally, as no personal violence accompanied the robbery, gave the safe verdict : "Guilty of getting out of the window." He adds that the most original was that of an Irish jury before whom a prisoner pleaded guilty, throwing himself on the mercy of the court. The verdict was : "Not guilty." The Judge, in surprise, exclaimed: "Why, he has confessed his rime!" The foreman responded : "Ah, ny Lord, you do not know that fellow, out we do. He is the most-notorious iar in the whole country, and no twelve nen who know his character can believe word that he says," And, as the jurors idhered to their verdict, the "liar" es-

W. Edmunds reported to the Alpany Law Journal of June 18, 1870, a nurder trial, which took place in New Fork city, and in which he appeared for the accused some thirty years before by sppointment of the court. The defeniant was a young woman who, leaving poor parents in New Jersey, went to New York city, and obtained a place as waiter in restaurant. She met and married a young butcher boy, but kept at work until her pregnancy compelled her to desist, when she went to her parental some to be confined. When she rearned to her husband's lodgings in New Fork city, she found them vacant and her own effects packed off. It was a case of seartless desertion. She discovered him at a slaughter-house talking to a woman, who were at the moment what she recognized as her, the defendant's, best iress, which she had bought with her wn earnings before marriage. He reused to talk with her. The next mornng he was seen to take a proffered cake rom the hands of a young woman, livide it with some companions, and in s few hours was dead, his companions being taken very sick, but surviving. The police, investigating the matter, found that the deceased had three wives, or rather three women who supposed themselves his wives. All three were arrested, but two were speedily released, as our heroine admitted that she had done the business. The case for the defense was weak, but after only a few minutes' absence the jury returned with a verdict of not guilty. The prisoner's counsel asked one of the jurors on what ground she was acquitted, "It served him right," was the answer.

BROTHERHOOD.

"There, boy, is a big penny for you; now go home and say your prayers like a Christian," said the plethoric to the lean on the avenue. "And what prayer shall I say?' asked little lean. "Say 'Our Father which art in heaven, "replied plethoric. "And is He our father-yours and mine too?"

"Most assuredly." "Then are you my big brother?" "Of course I am."

Then httle man looked up and asked the question which even religion can't compel any man to answer: "Aren't you ashamed of yourself to offer your poor little brother a penny when you have plenty, and you know he is 'most starved to death?"

In the course of a confidential converation with a friend who had recently had two new shirts made, we learned incidentally that the style of building shirts had radically changed, and that they were being made to button in front instead of at the back of the neck. The news was so good that we could not believe it until we had it directly from a shirtmaker, who showed us the ground plan and front elevation that had been prepared by architects for the erection of some fine shirts for our best citizens, and sure enough the old fashion of folddoor between the shoulder blades in the visited him, and commanded him to be gaged him. A man's stomach has been a sealed book for fifteen years, with the old boilar-iron bosom, with no port holes. Occasionally a man's heart aches, and if he could put a hand on it, without going around the back way and sneaking in under the arm, he could tell by the feeling whether it was unrequited affection that ailed him or rheumatism. With the new shirt an exploring expedition can be sent to the sent of the disease before it is everlastingly too late.

Men have been wounded, and before they could be turned over and me entrance to the shirt found they have bled to death. The old back-action shirt is a-fraud, and the new one is a daisy. It may be said by some that the new open esame shirt will show to the world the color of the undershirt. It might if one was going to use his shirt bosom for a pillow, but few do that. And, even if they did, that is the only way the world can know that a man wears a silk undershirt, with a monogram on the front, We hail the new open-winter shirt with delight, and are sure the public will when they once get their hand in,-Peck's Sun.
